Symposium Objectives

- Understand the Public Health model and why it is important to apply to the human trafficking problem;
- Understand the Public Health model is inclusive of all service providers, law enforcement and the court system when providing care to victims and survivors of human trafficking;
- Understand the health needs of victims and survivors are inclusive of the multiple stages of trauma that can be addressed through emergency care, short term care and long-term care;
- Understand the role of human rights and community in the human trafficking problem;
- Understand the unique role of health personnel in the identification of human trafficking victims and their legal and ethical responsibilities to those victims;
- Understand the value of applying a trauma-informed approach towards the system of care that is supportive of the health care professional, so they have the resources needed to address the health needs of victims and survivors;
- Understand the roles played by multiple agencies in responding to and preventing human trafficking (i.e., the criminal justice agencies, health and social support agencies, and economic development agencies);
- Leave with an understanding of a variety of resources available to them in the prevention of, identification of, and response to human trafficking victimization.
